Ten years later that division, formerly known as Timeless Creations, has provided the adult collector with many exotic and extremely collectible creations! Barbie Doll Exclusively for Timeless Creations showcases 170 plus dolls with gorgeous full color close-ups of faces, full length dolls and their collectible boxes as well as detailed information-series number, year of release and 1997 collector's values for ease in identification.
About the Author
Margo started collecting BARBIE dolls in 1979. It all began while walking through a local drugstore with her mom, Maureen Rana, and seeing a Black BARBIE doll on the top shelf of the toy aisle. The doll's coif was like the style used on her 1961 Bubblecut BARBIE doll that she had when she was a little girl, and in fact still owns. The hairstyle reminded Margo so much of the one she had when she was only ten years old that her mother bought it for her. Margo thinks that her mom bought her this doll because she always felt guilty for not buying Margo her first BARBIE doll back in 1959. That same year, her mother bought her the next doll. It was a Hispanic BARBIE doll. Two dolls, back to back, both brunettes and wearing red, one of Margo's favorite colors. These two dolls were like an avalanche. Margo started haunting thrift stores, flea markets, yard sales, antique shops and doll shows.
