Another Winner From Chess StarsBy Richard DeCredico in this day of encyclopedic and massive opening books, chess stars continue to put out compact and efficient tomes for higher level chess players (fide 2000+) ... this is not an introductory work for players looking for lots of verbiage and explanations

By playing 1.d4 Nf6 2.c4 g6 3.f3, White kills three birds with one shot. First of all, this is a natural way of seizing space. The second merit of 3.f3 is that it throws the Grmfeld fans out of their main repertoire. The third point is that it allows White to delay the development of his queen's knight. While in most systems its natural stand is on c3, against ...c5 plans it may go to d2 or a3, leaving c3 free for the other knight. Of course, Black can also choose the King's Indian. Then the Smisch is probably the most straightforward and natural answer. White's result in this particular branch (without 3.Nc3) is above 60%! Higher than any other system against the K.I.D.
